

Ecosexual Invocation to Gaia at Lolia Place, November 5, 2017

We come to Lolia from many different places and with many different relationships to honor the ever-evolving history of this land and her native people.

Hawaii arises from the ocean floor and is surrounded by water. The fires of volcanic eruptions and almost-constant winds have shaped its spirit. Lolia's rich topsoil and jungle sit on black lava. All elements together invoke this beautiful, amorous partner.

The powerful waves of the Pacific pummel the shores nearby while tradewinds whisper secrets from far away.

The Kanaka Maoli, the native Hawaiians, have been contacted about our event; and we hope for their blessing, even as we've not perceived their response yet.

Lolia, as a community host, offers a spirit of peace, cooperation, openness, empathy and joy, in harmony with the land it occupies.

Lolia welcomes us, with a great ecosystem in which we can reconnect with the forces of planet Earth. We come here in gratitude. We invoke the energetic forces of Air, Earth, Water and Fire, the Above, Below and Within to converge here and now to radiate their mighty forces upon us.

As we enter into a divine union and say our ecosexual vows to Gaia, we embrace the beauty of all life around us. We embrace Earth, Gaia, as our loving partner.

We vow to do what we can to help the Earth, and, in that process, to help ourselves.

We perceive no separation. Gaia is us; and we are Gaia.
